

ALEXANDER FRENKLEY

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Recruitment into Voice of America and Initial Training	1946
Frenkley Background
Organization and Early Programming of VOA Russian Service
1947: Congress Threatens VOA Budget, but Relents
1948: Early Security Problems: Nikki Nabokov, A Principal Founder of VOA Russian Service Ousted
1948: Alexander Barmine, Former Soviet General, Defects—Comes to Voice as Director, Russian/Ukrainian Branch; His Background
Soviet Government Attacks VOA; Begins Jamming Broadcasts
1949: VOA Enters Cold War Era Broadcastings
Barmine's Influence on VOA
1952: Frenkley Sent to Munich to Set Up Direct Russian Broadcasts from Munich to USSR
Return to Discussion of Barmine Influence on Voice of America
1964: Barmine's Transfer Out of VOA; Terry Catherman's Arrival as Russian Service Chief and His New Policy of Recruiting Young American Citizens with Russian Language Ability: Frictions with Catherman
An Example of Barmine's Defence of Russian Service in McCarthy Era
Comments on Differing Views of VOA Programming: Critique of Recent Programming Blurring of Program Turf Between VOA and Radio Liberty	