

AMBASSADOR MARSHALL GREEN

TABLE OF CONTENTS

KOREA – 1988 Interview

Assignment to Korea	1960-1961
Japanese-Korean relations
Independence leader Syngman Rhee
U.S. presence in Korea and Washington desk officers
Korean economic and political situation
Ambassador Walter McConaughy
Elections fraud, "justifiable grievances," student demonstrations
Relations between Syngman Rhee and Ambassador McConaughy
President Eisenhower's visit
New elections: President Yun Po Sun, Prime Minister Chang Myun
Devaluation of Korean won
Attempts to improve Japanese-Korean relations
Living conditions
Chargé
Prime Minister Chang Myun's government
U.S. involvement in Korean government
Military discontent
Military Coup
U.S. position on coup
War games and contingency planning
Embassy reaction to coup
Attempts to arrange compromise between government and insurgents
President Yun Po Sun
Washington's reactions to embassy actions
Chang Myun's letter
Military Junta's marshal law
Fear of North Korean action
Meeting with American community
Korean military
Arrival of Ambassador Samuel Berger
Working with Ambassador Berger
Role of the CIA
Meeting with General Park Chung Hee
Importance of Integrity
Leaving Korea

Conclusion