

PAUL KREISBERG

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Introduction
Columbia University, China studies
Joined Foreign Service	1952
Bombay, India	1953-1954
Taiwan	1955
Chinese language studies, Mandarin
Tension between Taiwanese and mainlanders
Relocations with Ambassador Drumright
U.S. – Taiwanese relations
Taiwan Strait crisis of 1954-5
Hong Kong	1955-1969
Political officer
Chinese internal developments and change
British views on Chinese intentions re Hong Kong
Principal Concerns of US Consulate
Chinese refugees
Policy of “no contact with mainland China nationals”
No indications of any change in mainland China stability
Dulles-Alex Johnson “bathroom” story
Ruth Bacon
Secretary of State Rusk opposes change in China policy
Alleged effort to assassinate Zhou Enlai en route to Bandung conference
CIA
Ray Cline
Chinese attitude towards possible Taiwan evacuation of islands
Soviet attitude towards China lukewarm
Walter Robertson doubts Soviet – China hostility
Department of State	1960-
INR – Internal Chinese Affairs
No recollection of Pres. Kennedy’s intentions re China
Sino-India border issue
INR assessment of China’s intentions
Rusk views Chinese as expansionists
1962 Straits Crisis
Office of Asian Communist Affairs
Lindsey Grant “annoys” White House’s William Bundy
Mongolia

Tension within two China desks
Information on China via Hong Kong
No White House guidance
U.S. ready to renew talks with Chinese in Warsaw
White House bypasses State Dept
Preparing to negotiate with the Chinese
Japanese to be kept in the dark
Who is more paranoid, Nixon or Kissinger?
Congress not kept informed
Chinese involvement in Vietnam War
Importance of Warsaw talks
Shanghai communiqué
How the US- China talks worked
Gronousky
Controversy over relationship with Taiwan
White House – State tension over China or Vietnam having top priority
State, Congress, and Taiwan relations act
Chinese understanding of relationship between Congress and Administration
Congress and Administration
Reason for leaving EAP
Principal reason for maintaining good relations with China

Final Remarks

Diaries
Memoranda, within State & NSC State