

AMBASSADOR EDWIN W. MARTIN

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Background

- Childhood in India
- Oberlin College
- Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy
- Foreign Service Test
- Interest in China and language training
- Evacuation of families and transfer to Taiwan

Rangoon, Burma

1950-1951

- Political situation
- Assassination of Burmese leaders
- Insurgent groups
- Chinese population and organization
- Economic situation
- Impact of Korean War on aid to Burma
- Chinese Nationalist troops in Burma
- Importance of Burma

Ambassador to Burma

1971-1973

- Posts leading up to appointment
- Isolated posts
- Center for drugs
- General Ne Win and Burma's political situation
- Burma-Thai rivalry
- Resistance to stopping drug industry
- Heroin in cities
- Khakweyei, Burmese irregular forces and drug smuggling
- Request for helicopters to fight drug smuggling
- UN Involvement
- Burmese relations with PRC
- U.S. and offshore petroleum drilling
- Lack of tourism
- Embassy staff
- British intelligence surveillance

Conclusion

- Greatest accomplishment in Burma
- Frustrations
- Importance of golf in Burma
- Foreign Service as a career
- Retirement

Changing role of the Foreign Service

Introduction to experience in China

- China in the 1940s and political reporting
- Leaving china before Communist Invasion
- KMT vs CCP
- Chinese students and the attraction of communism
- Nature of political reporting
- Transfer of the Kuomintang and U.S. reaction
- Chiang Ching-huo

Working for Chinese Affairs

1951-1955

- China policy under Eisenhower and Truman
- Geneva, Warsaw and Panmanjom talks
- Chou En-lai
- Korea and negotiating with China
- Geneva talks
- Denouncing use of force
- Taiwan Strait Crisis and Office of Chinese Affairs
- Protecting offshore islands
- State Department under Dulles and committees under Eisenhower administration
- 1958 Crisis
- Sino-Soviet split

Consul General, Hong Kong

1967-1970

- Hong Kong: window for China
- British help in gathering information
- Bombs and murder
- Hong Kong's instability and U.S. investments
- Burning British mission in Beijing
- China's attitude towards Hong Kong
- Turning point in Chinese relations with U.S.
- Vietnam
- Trade with China and lifting travel restrictions
- Visiting Burma
- U.S. Embassy in Hong Kong
- "Current Background", Chinese Magazine

Ambassador to Burma

1971-1973

- Changing policies towards minorities
- Burmese relations with China
- Burmese nonalignment
- Drug smuggling
- Relations with Soviet ambassador

Kennedy Administration

Attitude towards China under Kennedy administration
Political advisor to Commander in Chief, Pacific
Admitting People's Republic of Mongolia to UN
Undersecretary of State, Chester Bowles
Secretary of State Rusk and Kennedy's attitude towards China
Recognizing China
Travel to Taiwan with Vice President Johnson